J. OSWALD LUTTED, Hawaiian Hotel. 5895-4f

long after he had won the cordial dislike of every reporter whose duty it was to visit his office. He offended the members of the bar, who through real good will attempted to help him to understand local conditions, and chose as confidants and advisers a number of lawyers who have little else than their democracy to recommend them. He needlessly aroused the resentment of the Hawaiians and made himself ridiculous, because he would not be told and would not take time to learn for himself. His lack of self control in the court room, his intemperate outbursts, and his apparent desire for physical combat, did not help him in the good opinion of the better element of the community. And when he finally did become involved in a fistie encounter, his attempt to use a revolver (which he had in his pocket) was but the culmination of his other indiscretions.

Mr. McCarn can not blame the people of Hawaii for his failure. Nor can he truthfully claim that political influence had any part in his undoing. The backing which he had in the beginning was unflinching by reason or creed, and represents the strongest force in Hawaii today, the force which stands for decency and righteousness. Mr. McCarn has failed. His successor will succeed on Mr. McCarn's own platform—provided he is man enough for the job.—Maui News.
